	Jan	Feb	Mar	Apr	May	Jun	Jul	Aug	Sep	Oct	Nov	Dec
After arriving from migration redwing and fieldfare restock on windfall fruit
Hazel and willow catkins provide an early source of nectar for pollinators
Song and mistlethrushes sing to claim their territory
Blackthorn in flower
Bumblebees emerge looking for holes to build nests
Aphids hatch and ladybirds come out of hibernation
Swallows return from winter migration for the summer
First broods of birds such as blue tits and blackbirds
Bees and butterflies can commonly be seen flying between flowers
Slow worms come out of hibernation
Dawn chorus in full voice
Birds nesting
Cowparsley, bluebells, red campion and stitchwort in flower
Moths plentiful, this is a good time to moth trap
Meadow wildflowers in full bloom
Great time to see bats at dusk, swooping on the insect population
Peak flight of the noble chafer
Hedgerow fruits are ripening
Wasps stop being insectivorous and eat sugary food like windfalls instead
Flowering ivy provides a vital nectar source for bees, hoverflies and moths
Autumn fungi such as blewitts and giant pufballs start to appear
Frogs and toads go into hibernation
Mistletoe fruits ripen, providing food for birds such as mistlethrush
Check for hedghogs and move any material you burn on bonfire night											-
A good time to clean out old nests from bird boxes people's trust for endangered species

